Ms. Ria Das, 30, India

Ria Das is a criminal lawyer based in India, working at the intersection of environmental crime, organised crime, and international criminal law. Her experience in criminal litigation examines how legal tools used to combat money laundering, corruption, asset forfeiture, and transnational organised crime can strengthen responses to environmental crimes. She serves in leadership roles with international organisations, advancing youth empowerment, environmental justice and anti-corruption, including the UN's Asia Pacific Youth Advisor, Deputy Chair- IUCN World Commission on Environmental Law Early Career Group, World Youth for Climate Justice, and Green Rights Coalition. Her research with leading academic institutions, including the European Union, University of Oxford, Canadian Environmental Crime Research Network to name a few, form a coherent body of work addressing access to climate justice, youth rights, climate litigation, anti-corruption and environmental crimes.
