

Grecia Flores Hinostroza is a passionate advocate for human rights, international law, and gender equality. She is currently pursuing a law degree, with a focus on women's rights and human rights. As the founder of the WISE (Women for International Studies and Equity) project, she leads a research group aimed at promoting accessible knowledge on international human rights, especially for marginalized communities.

In addition, Grecia has experience in legal research and analysis, having contributed to various projects and publications, including a recent paper on gender equality in Peruvian law. She is dedicated to ensuring that legal frameworks are inclusive and human-centered, and seeks to empower young voices in global governance processes.

She believes that it is an honor to be part of the UNODC YouthLED Advisory Board, and looks forward to working with like-minded peers to advance integrity and transparency across international platforms.

United Nations
Office on Drugs and Crime

Global Resource for Anti-Corruption
Education and Youth Empowerment