

YouthLED

Ms. Mamie McCreary, 18, United States of America

Mamie McCreary is a student at Georgetown University pursuing International Politics, with an aim to delve into African studies, alongside post-colonial studies, as her education continues to flourish. She is particularly passionate about the Sudanese “proxy” war as it truly demonstrates vulnerability that majority of the African continent has, in terms of exploitation, corruption and conflict. Mamie continues to prove her yearning for academic growth through her participation as a fellow at the Youth in Policy Institute, which included intense policy research on socioeconomic inequities in the state of California. Her capstone project on Sudanese “forgotten” war alongside further learning on the political system of the United States and interning at the Jordanian embassy, has strengthened a plethora of skills such as communication, public speaking, research, and teamwork. Her studies at Al Khor International School, spurred her political interest, as she took the AS subjects of History, English Literature, and Business studies. Furthermore, her extracurricular activities have involved the Duke of Edinburgh International Awards, Model United Nations, and a variety of sports.

United Nations
Office on Drugs and Crime

Global Resource for Anti-Corruption
Education and Youth Empowerment

back to YouthLED