

Ms. Parnneh Mallobe, 26, Liberia

Ms. Parnneh Mallobe is the Communication Assistant at Accountability Lab Liberia, an organization that, through advocacy targeted on issues of corruption, integrity, transparency, and accountability, works with citizens and the Government, to make sure that the resources of the country are evenly and transparently shared so that all citizens benefit from them equally. In her role as the communication assistant, Parnneh is involved in training, mentoring and supporting the works of the Lab in order to support active citizenship, and responsible and accountable institutions.

She has five years of experience in working as an emerging professional journalist reporting on issues affecting women and girls, judicial accountability and reforms within the legal framework of the extractive industry as well as the large-scale environmental pollution engulfing cities in Liberia.

She obtained a Diploma in Journalism from the Peter Quaqua School of Journalism. Currently, she is a student at the University of Liberia studying Sociology and Public Administration. She is an alumna of the Young Political Leadership School Africa – YPLS, earning a certificate in policy advocacy, governance and leadership. Also, she is an alumna of the Young African Leaders Initiative, YALI RLC.

She has volunteered for community based-organizations including the Kids Education Engagement Project (KEEP), Girls for Literacy Liberia and European Union Mission in Liberia, and is passionate about giving back to society, and exhibits this passion by mentoring young people in her country, and facilitating trainings for young people on different social and educational themes. Parnneh is also the founder of Pama Co., a social enterprise that supports body positivity and promotes self-love.
