

Radwa Tammam is a human rights professional with more than 6 years of experience in the fields of humanitarian aid, women rights, and peacebuilding. For more than 6 years, she has been an advocate for the empowerment and protection of women surviving conflict, child protection, and the human rights of migrants, asylum seekers, and refugees from the Middle East and Africa. She has worked with reputable organizations like Save the Children International and Care International.

In order to further the commitment to her professional and personal passion for human rights, Radwa has joined the Justice Call Organization as Project Support Coordinator with a focus on the operationalization of peacebuilding and sustaining peace agenda in Sudan.

Radwa holds a bachelor's degree in Sociology and a diploma in NGO management. She is also currently pursuing a master's degree in Applied Human Rights at the University of Applied Arts in Vienna, Austria. Through the interdisciplinary master's degree, she has been getting in-depth knowledge of the theoretical foundations and the international system for the protection of human rights in addition to its international preventive measures and monitoring mechanisms to combat the violation of human rights.

Radwa is aspiring to a world where everyone enjoys basic human rights. She has a strong belief that this could not be achieved without empowering the new generations of children and youth who are powerful actors for maintaining sustainable development, promoting integrity, and ethics principles for countering corruption and all forms of violence on all levels.
